

Trish Steele and Mark Fangue - a couple with a shared message

Trish Steele and Mark Fangue are a couple, speakers, authors, and conversational leaders who believe that life can become more meaningful, joyful, and abundant at every age.

At 74, Trish and Mark are living the message they share with others: it is never too late for love, never too late to pursue your purpose, and never too late to create a life you truly love.

Their story brings together two remarkable life journeys and a shared passion for helping people discover greater happiness, health, connection, and abundance. Through their personal experiences, they explore what it means to continue growing, loving, learning, and contributing throughout life—and to embrace the possibility of living "happily ever after."

Trish Steele is an author, humanitarian, speaker, and founder of Safe Passage Heals, a mission devoted to helping women who have experienced abuse move toward healing, hope, and a better life. Her work is rooted in compassion, resilience, and a lifelong commitment to empowering others.

Mark Fangue is a speaker, teacher, writer, and conversational leader. A former United States Air Force instructor, Mark taught technical curriculum to military personnel from multiple nations. His life has also included crisis-line volunteering, leading fellowship groups, teaching seminars on Fair Trade and sustainable income, public speaking, music, drama, and helping people recognize the power of connection, gratitude, and personal energy.

Together, Mark and Trish bring decades of experience, relationships, challenges, successes, and personal transformation to their conversations. Rather than simply telling people how to live a better life, they share what they have learned from actually living it.

Their conversations explore questions such as:

- How can we become happier as we grow older?
- How can couples continue to grow together rather than apart?
- Is it really possible to find—or rediscover—love later in life?

- How do purpose and service contribute to a fulfilling life?
- Can financial abundance and meaningful contribution coexist?
- What does it take to create a vibrant life at 50+ ?
- How can we remain curious, connected, and passionate throughout our lives?

Mark and Trish believe that age should not define what is possible. Their message is one of hope, possibility, love, purpose, and conscious living.

They are especially passionate about reaching people in the second half of life who may be asking themselves, "What comes next?" Their answer is both simple and profound:

There can be a beautiful next chapter—and it may become the best chapter yet.

Through speaking engagements, interviews, writing, and media conversations, Mark and Trish invite audiences to reconsider what aging, relationships, success, happiness, and abundance can look like.

Their shared philosophy can be summed up in one powerful idea:

We are never too old to grow.
Never too old to love.
Never too old to dream.
And never too old to make a difference.

THE CONVERSATION

Trish and Mark walk onto the stage holding hands. Letting the audience absorb that they are about to hear from a couple. Immediately, people know that this is not going to be two separate speeches.

Trish and Mark raise the questions and then share their heart-felt inspirational experiences as to how relationships and lives can have a more loving, happier, and kind sense of oneness.

For media interviews, speaking engagements, collaborations, and appearances, Trish and Mark welcome opportunities to share their story and their message with audiences seeking inspiration, practical wisdom, and a renewed sense of possibility.
